Introduction: NIDM conducted the course on Role of Panchayati Raj institutions in Disaster Management in collaboration with Andhra Pradesh Human Resource Development Institute (APHRDI) at Bapatla, District Guntur, Andhra Pradesh on November 12-16, 2018. 42 officials, mainly District Panchayati Raj Officers, Police officials, NGOs etc. from various panchayats of various disaster prone districts of Andhra Pradesh, attended this programme.

Objectives of the Course: The course was conducted with the following objectives to enable the participants to

1. Explain the concept of Disaster Management and Institutional Framework of Disaster management in the country
2. Explain strategies for mainstreaming disaster risk reduction into ongoing schemes and future developmental activities.
3. Explain basic life saving skills in disasters
4. Explain the process of preparation of Preparedness and Response Plan for Panchayats

Course Details: During the inaugural session, participants were welcomed by Shri Shekher Chaturvedi, Asstt. Prof. NIDM and explained about the utility and importance of the course. NIDM thanked APHRDI and Government of Andhra Pradesh for having agreed to conduct the programme jointly. Shri Chaturvedi briefed the participants about the content of the course and methodology being adopted for conduct of the said course. Session ended with formal vote of thanks. The technical session began with the basic concepts of disaster management followed by a small exercise. During this session, participants were exposed to definitions of Hazard, Risk, Vulnerability and Capacity and DM Cycle. The last session of the day focused on the institutional mechanism of disaster management present in the country and at the state/sub-district level.

Second Day began with the session on Hazard, Vulnerability and Capacity analysis of an area. The participants were explained the process of analyzing Hazard, Vulnerability and Capacity through lecture and exercise taking an example of the area participants are exposed to. The last session of the participants was taken by Shri D. Chakrapani, IAS(Retd.), Director General of APHRDI. Shri Chakrapani discussed with the participants about the risks involved and actions taken by participants during their tenure in their own departments.

During day three, participants were explained about the role of panchayati raj institutions during the disaster emergencies. They were also explained about the various provisions in Panchayati Raj act of different States including Andhra Pradesh. Participants were then taken for a field visit to a Panchayat where participants did the hazard risk and vulnerability assessment of the panchayat and had interaction with Panchayat Secretary and panchayat people mostly fishermen & women. The evening session was devoted to preparation of plan for the panchayat and role of panchayati raj institutions in managing emergencies in the panchayat.

Fourth day, participants were exposed to Basic life support techniques and other related activities of first aid. This session was a mixture of theory as well as practical. Participants did hands-on practice of bandages, CPR and survivor lifting.

The last day started with a session on various policies and guidelines prevailing in the state of Andhra Pradesh with respect to panchayati Raj sector. The session was taken by Addl. Commissioner, Panchayati raj Govt. of Andhra Pradesh. He also chaired the valedictory session of the course. During this session participants presented their plan, gave feedback and were provided with certificates.
