World Health Organization (WHO) has not advised people against eating bakery items amid the COVID-19 outbreak

April 9, 2020

An advisory purportedly issued by the World Health Organization (WHO) asking people to avoid eating bakery items amid the COVID19 outbreak is making rounds on social media. The advisory asks people to stop eating the bakery items as they are not washable and can get infected with virus easily. FACTLY has found the advisory to be ‘fake’. ‘WHO Sri Lanka’ has debunked the claim and clarified that WHO has not advised against eating bakery items. The Press Information Bureau (PIB) has also debunked the Old video of a man spitting on another man in New York subway is being shared in the wake of COVID-19 outbreak

Did you watch our new video?

Textbook Image and Netflix Series Show Prior Knowledge of COVID-19?

The story first appeared here

Sources:
Claim – Facebook post (archived)
Fact –
https://www.facebook.com/WHOSriLanka/photos/a.2035735656687770/260464258646378/?type=3&theater
https://www.facebook.com/pibfactcheck/photos/a.103726557827113/143344430531992/?type=3&theater

No scientific evidence to suggest that inhaling hot water steam can kill Coronavirus

Did you watch our new video?

A video is being widely shared on Facebook with the claim and clarified the same.

Sources:
Claim – Facebook post (archived)
Fact –
https://www.facebook.com/WHOSriLanka/photos/a.2035735656687770/260464258646378/?type=3&theater
https://www.facebook.com/pibfactcheck/photos/a.103726557827113/143344430531992/?type=3&theater