Webinar Report on Climate Change and Next Gen Leadership April 16, 2021 – Friday, 3 to 5pm

5. Background:

Climate change is a complex global problem. But it is happening now and affecting children everywhere and in particular over half a billion children living in extremely high flood occurrence zones and nearly 160 million living in high or extremely high drought severity zones. Children living in places where extreme heat is becoming a growing problem including in Asian coastal cities. According to UNICEF 2015 report, children bear the brunt and it disproportionately impacts the poorest, deepening existing inequities among the children (UNICEF 2015). But far from being passive victims, young people all over the world have begun to fight back on a scale never seen before. Take Greta Thunberg. In 2018, the 15-year-old from Sweden sparked a global movement of school-age students demanding greater action from governments to fight climate change. Now millions are marching to demonstrate their support. Whether through education, technology, science or law – young people far and wide are tapping into their skills to speak up for climate action. Every person under the age of 18 has the right to participate in the decision-making processes that impact them as stated in the Convention on the Rights of the Child. They (youth) are adaptable and can quickly make low-carbon lifestyles and career choices a part of their daily lives. Youth should therefore be given a chance to take an active part in the decision-making of local, national and global levels. They can actively support initiatives that will lead to the passage of far-reaching legislation.

Understanding the unprecedented future, CCDRR NIDM proactively started capacity building of stakeholders and masses by organizing webinar talks on various issues related to safety and security of children. Further, in its series of webinars CCDRR has organized this talk on “Climate Change and Next Gen Leadership”

Webinar on Climate Change and Next Gen
Leadership

16th April 2021

National Institute of Disaster Management
(Government of India, Ministry of Home Affairs)
www.nidm.gov.in

BACKGROUND

Climate change is a complex global problem. But it is happening now and affecting children everywhere and in particularly over half a billion children living in extremely high flood occurrence zones and nearly 140 million living in high or extremely high drought severity zones. Children living in places where extreme heat is becoming a growing problem including in Asian coastal cities. According to UNICEF 2015 report, children bear the brunt and it disproportionately impacts the poorest, deepening existing inequalities among the children (UNICEF 2015). But far from being passive victims, young people all over the world have begun to fight back on a scale never seen before. Take Greta Thunberg. In 2018, the 15-year-old from Sweden sparked a global movement of school-age students demanding greater action from governments to fight climate change. Now millions are marching to demonstrate their support. Whether through education, technology, science or law – young people far and wide are tapping into their skills to speak up for climate action. Every person under the age of 18 has the right to participate in the decision-making processes that impact them as stated in the Convention on the Rights of the Child. They (young) are educated and can quickly make low-carbon lifestyle and career choices a part of their daily lives. Youth should therefore be given a chance to take an active part in the decision-making of local, national and global levels. They can actively support initiatives that will lead to the passage of far-reaching legislation.

Understanding the unprecedented future, CCDRR, NIDM proactively started capacity building of stakeholders and masses by organizing webinar talks on various issues related to safety and security of children since May 2021 which resulted out to the domain experts. Part of this series of webinars CCDRR is organizing next talks on "Climate Change and Next Gen Leadership".

Objectives:

- To empower voice of youth fighting climate change adaptation
- To create opportunities for children in awareness of climate change among youth in the countries.
- To develop coping strategies for encourage pro-environmental behaviour among youth and children
