Webinar Report On “Emergency Communications for Disaster Management” 30th November, 2022 (Wednesday)

Inaugural Session

Mr. Gunda Goutham Krishna Teja, Junior Consultant, NIDM welcomed all the dignitaries and participants. He set the context of the webinar. He said “All disaster emergencies and crisis events are by nature chaotic and highly dynamic, creating physical, emotional, and social disorder. In such crisis events and emergencies, communications is critical at all phases of disaster management. Communications during emergencies incorporates a wide range of measures to manage risks to communities and the environment. Drawing from various sources that include telecommunication satellites, radar, telemetry, meteorology and remote sensing, early warning is made possible.

Technical Session

Shri Sandeep Baruah, Scientist-F, Vigyan Prasar, Govt of India delivered a training session on “Role of HAM Radio in Disaster Management”. He highlighted about the functions, significance of HAM radio for disaster management. He concluded his session by highlighting the Amateur Radio Licensing Exam Tutorial.

Dr. Raju Thapa, Technical Officer-EM, VHS, CDC-India delivered a training session on “Concept of Public Health Emergency Operations Centre (PHEOC)”. He highlighted about “Prime Minister-Ayushman Bharat Health Infrastructure Mission (PM-ABHIM): Highlights. He also explained about the EOC organizational principles and examples.

He concluded his session by highlighting the need for EOCs for public health.

Key Takeaways

- ❖ There is need to utilize GIS maps in disaster management as they provide instant access to information required in decision making.
- ❖ Emergency Operations Centre should function all the days 24X7
- ❖ To develop institutional capacity for staff, staff, and the system, PHEOCs regarding public health preparedness and response
- ❖ Enhance capacity to receive, analyze, display, report, and share daily situations reports
